

Housing Partnership Offers Weatherization Assistance Program in Clay County

-- State funding provides free services for qualified, low-income families --

Clay County, FL -- Serving as the nation's core program for delivering energy efficiency services to low-income households, the Florida Department of Energy and the Housing Partnership of Northeast Florida provides permanent solutions to reduce the energy burden on low-income families by installing cost-effective, energy efficiency materials and services at no cost to homeowners who are income eligible.

The Weatherization Assistance Program prioritizes services to the elderly, persons with disabilities, and households with children. Weatherization helps homeowners conserve energy and reduce costs for heating, cooling and electricity.

Types of weatherization services include attic insulation, roof coating for mobile homes, weather stripping or replacing doors, caulking and sealing air leaks, installing solar window screens, testing refrigerators and water heaters for energy usage, tune up and repairs for heating and cooling systems, and energy saving tips and ideas on how the home can save energy due to weatherization work.

This mission of the Housing Partnership is to facilitate community development by offering a range of services that expands safe, affordable housing for low and moderate-income families and improves the quality of life in Northeast Florida.
